

College and Careers: The Myths, The Facts, The Fears

Interactive Lecture/Discussion For Parents and High School Students

Five-time success author, Ted Talk Presenter and Veteran Career Coach, Laura Berman Fortgang, MCC, and Kimberly Ferlauto, Director of School Counseling at Verona High School, will lead a conversation about guiding your teen's education and potential career choices.

Whether your son or daughter has any clue at all as to what they want to study or do as a career, come explore what is working and not working for post-graduates based on Fortgang's 25 years of experience supporting people to find satisfying careers.

Discover:

- The most important question we are NOT asking that will make all the difference
- The three biggest myths about choosing a course of study and the truth to bust them
- The critical components to sustainable career satisfaction (grown ups listen up! This is for you too!)

Parents—Ask questions and share your concerns about directing your child's future in terms of choices of career direction and appropriate education or training. Learn what really works in the world of work for your young person post-graduation and how you can help set the stage.

High School Students—Explore what your thoughts and fears are about focusing your studies to one direction or another. And what if you don't have any clue as to what you want to do with your life? (you're only a teenager, for goodness sakes!) That's OK too. Most people don't.

Let us dispel the myths and help you understand how to make a choice now or later, whenever it's right for you.
